

May 14, 2009
Manya Gordon

Where in the World?

The Alps are a large mountain range in Europe. They were caused by the African and European plates colliding about 30 million years ago. There are lots of metamorphic and sedimentary rocks because there was a lot of pressure when the plates collided and over the years since then. There are also not mountain

igneous rocks.
and pretty

volcanoes in this range to produce
The Alps are a really cool place.

